A LITTLE GUILD HERE, A LITTLE GUILD THERE—
The St. James Woman's Chib which numbered more than 250 women last year has decided to approach the new year with a new format. The members will be divided into Guilds to be spread over 'It areas in the parish.

Each Guild will have twenty or less women in it and will be allowed to select the time of day or night for their meeting and project for their Chairman for the present Guild Committee is Dusty Egan of N. Forest. The coordinator is Ann Scanlon of N. Haddow who is also the new second vice-president. She is the one to call for more information or if you have not been contacted yet. Het phone number is CI. 5-4756.

TESTING
When Marie Hutchens took a course that taught the technique of testing for intelligence quotients, little did her neighborn on N. Douglas knowthat they were soon to tell all.

In order to pass the course, Maria had to test 20 people. The 20 turned out to be all neighbors of hers.

"The trouble, today, is the wind can't blow skirts any higher than they already are!"

Watch That Trash!

The trash piles from flooded basemoots are not the same as trash piles from the spring felescard, Assistant Village Manager Fred Schneider warned today. It has long been a practice of people to go through the piles of discarded items in front of homes during the spring clean-up, he said, but the items in those piles are usually relatively clean.

Simple Repairs Remedy No-Ring Doorbell

A ringing doorbell can be a nuisance.

One that doesn't ring can be a nuisance as well. There isn't much you can do about the former. The other problem is a matter the former. The other probsem is a muser of simple repairs.

To check out a faulty doorbell, start with the bell button. This is the part that is handled, that is subject to weathering. Remove the screws that hold the button in place. Make sure that both wires are fastened to the terminal screws in back. One may have slipped loose.

IF BOTH WIRES are firmly connected, then place the screwdriver blade across the terminals. If the bell rings, the button is at fault.

Sometimes the button cap is removable.
If it is, you can get at the inside contact

HOUSE VOLTAGE current is too strong for a doorbell. For this reason, it is stepped down in voltage by a transformer. The transformer looks like a small metal block with wires connected on both sides. You will find it near the fuse box or fastened to the basement ceiling. Following the bell wires will help you locate it.

The primary terminals are on the fuse box side, have house wire connected to them. Secondary terminals are on the bell side of the transformer, have bell wires attached to them. Don't worry about the names; just remember to stay clear of the side with heavy wire.

Using a screwdriver with an insulated handle, test the secondary terminals — the ones with bell wire. The voltage is weak, so there is no danger — just stick to the right side. With the blade across the terminals, there will be a small spark if the transformer is all right.

EXCEPT FOR replacing the Gaslight Era Is Back

More than 1.6 million gaslights are now inuse as patio and walkaway lights throughtout the country, reports the American Gas Association, in what has been called "a return to elegance."

Today's gaslights come in a variety of shapes, and sizes to complement architecture and decor. Modern gaslights are applicated, caler to clean and more transformer, you may leave electricity on when checking out parts of the bell system, since voltage is low.

Some homes have bells that still work off dry cells. These may need replacing. Touching both terminals with a wire will cause a spark if the cell is still good.

No Need To Blow a Fuse

Blown fines may be just a memory to onecowners and spartment dwellers in the xt decade as bettery-powered appliances place plug-in styles and help eliminate erloading of electrical circuits. Scores of devices formerly dependent on household current now are powered self-contained batteries, according to 10 year watch Company market
